1. New Book on Whiteflies

The book Whitefly and Whitefly-Borne Viruses in the Tropics: Building a Knowledge Base for Global Action has just been published. It describes the impact that whiteflies and their viruses--regarded as two of the worst crop pests of all times--have on agricultural sustainability, ecosystem health, and human health.

2. Getting a Handle on High-Value Agricultural Products

A group of about 40 experts in all aspects of high-value agricultural products--from production to processing and marketing--met at CIAT headquarters in early October 2005 to help the CGIAR address the question of how the poor, especially neglected groups such as rural women, can benefit from growing markets for these products.
